Every, erm, shoe tells a story and artist Alice Instone, with her girly, glittery, colour-popping style, paints the footwear of the famous and fashionable in this series of cheerful "shoe portraits". Bianca Jagger, Alexander McQueen, Laura Bailey and Nicole Farhi are just a few of the personalities to lend their footwear to the cause. Our favourite is the portrait of Liz de Havilland's (wife of shoe designer Terry de Havilland) handcrafted gold snakeskin boots, designed by her husband and presented to her instead of a ring on their engagement. Accompanying the portraits are Warhol-style silk-screens and a series of trashy shoe sculptures.
